How to Choose the Right Filing Systems

Organizations face unique challenges that demand unique solutions. TAB can help analyze, plan and implement custom records management solutions to meet your needs. An effectively designed records management program is an essential tool to enhance responsiveness, increase customer satisfaction, ensure compliance with industry regulations and improve access to information.

TAB offers custom tiered solutions to match your exact needs. We provide color-coded filing systems, high-density mobile and shelving, records management consulting and file room outsourcing services.

Folders 101: Choosing the right folder for your filing needs

Did you know that the folder is the most fundamental element of record management? It has three basic purposes:

- House and Identify documents
- Support and Protect documents
- Align Labels with each other for Locating desired documents

Choosing the right folder for your record management needs can seem like a daunting task, but TAB can provide you with the basics to help make your choice as simple as possible.

Folder Storage Capacity

What size documents will you be storing?

Are you storing many pages together, or heavier documents?

Will there be any odd size documents that need to be stored within the file (i.e. Photos, disks)?

How often will you be using these documents/folders?

Are you using open lateral files or pull drawer vertical files?

Does the information in your folders need to be segmented into different groups?

These are all important questions that help determine the type of material your folder should be made from, as well as how much expansion you will need in that folder, what accessories might be helpful, or what type of tab configuration you will need.

Folder Material

Folders are manufactured in a variety of paper stocks and thicknesses (point categories). The paper stocks include Manila, Color, Pressboard and Red Wallet/Red Rope. They can range in thickness options from 11 to 28 point with the greater the point, the more durable the paper stock.

The most popular paper stock is Manila. It comes in 11, 14 and 18-point thickness and is best for light to moderate use. Some of the reasons it is so popular is because it can be written or printed on and is smudge resistant. It is smooth and resists tearing, folding or bursting.

Color paper stock, available in a variety of colors and comes in 11 or 14 point. It is also best for light to moderate use. Color folders help speed up filing and retrieval time in any system and are ideal for designating special records. Alternatives are manila folders with color end tabs called Color Stripe folders.

Pressboard is one of the most durable materials in the industry. Type I is a high density, 20-point premium stock that is actually thinner, but more durable – and it is available in 16 colors. Type II is a medium density, 25-point pressboard stock and is the industry standard for commercial or classification folders. It comes in Green/Gray color only.

Red Wallet or Red Rope stock is used for Expansion Pockets. It primarily comes in 22-point thickness, with a few 28-point options available as well. This is a very durable material, which is combined with Tyvek® Tape on the gusset expansion of the file to make it virtually indestructible. This stock is available in its well-known brownish red color, or in eleven other colors.

Accessories

Printing is primarily used to help identify the record inside the folder. The most popular place for ink printing is the front cover, but printing can be done on any panel and can be done in black ink or any other color.

Although documents can be filed “loose leaf” within a folder, another method of housing papers can be to use a fastener. Fasteners have several benefits. They ensure that the documents will not be mixed easily with other records and they allow the information to be attached in an organized manner in its protective cover. Fastener styles vary and can be put in any of eight positions within a folder.

Pockets eliminate filing time for odd-sized items. Accessing these items requires minimal filing time because the documents are not attached to the folder, but are held securely in place by the pocket. They come in two types – Factory Installed Manila Pockets or Transparent Poly/Vinyl Self Adhesive Pockets and in several sizes. The pockets can be put in any of the same eight positions as fasteners.

To keep information in organized groups within your folder, you can use Dividers. These can come with or without fasteners installed in the dividers and can be factory installed or self-installed.

Color-coding is a system in which colors are assigned to represent letters and/or numbers to create color block patterns that are visually easy to scan. TAB offers several color-coded solutions.

Self-Adhesive Hand Wrap Labels are printed with inks and coated with adhesives that last a lifetime. They come in Alphabetic, Numeric or Solid Color styles and are ½” or 1” in size. Ideal for small office applications or as an over-wrap for re-using existing folders. These labels are efficient and economical.

Factory Attached Strip Labels are single strip labels that are printed from computer data. They have unlimited options such as any color palette, lines of cross reference, highlighting, font options, even customizable with a company logo! TAB can even provide labels on a daily basis. Once we receive your data, we generate your new color-coded folders, and deliver your customized folders within 3-5 business days from when the records were transmitted.

ORGANIZE. ACCESS. MANAGE.

Better organized files and documents. Quicker access to information. Lower costs. Reduced exposure to risk. These are the benefits of choosing TAB as your records management partner.

TAB Labels

Increase Productivity - Improve Customer Service - Achieve Business Objectives

Using a color-coded filing method can dramatically reduce file retrieval time. Color-coding assigns colors to represent letters and/or numbers which create color block patterns that are visually easy to scan. TAB offers several color-coded solutions on the following pages.

Alphabetic Labels

Alphabetic Color-Coding is the arrangement of files by name, company or subject. Alphabetic order is the most common and popular method for filing systems under 5,000 records. Alpha filing allows direct access to files because a cross-reference is not needed. Large volume alpha systems have repetitions (common last names) that hinder filing efficiency. Therefore, alpha systems that are over 10,000 records should have further color code divisions, such as adding a color code for first letter, first name and/or the third letter of the last name. This provides further distinction in larger file groups.

Options for Alphabetic Color-Coding:

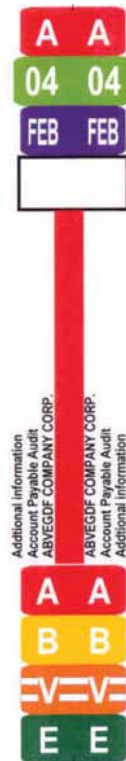

Hand Wrap Labels

Select and apply individual labels that are printed with inks and coated with adhesives that last a lifetime.

CompuColor Strip Labels are data driven and have unlimited options, including any color palette, lines of cross-reference, highlighting, font options, even company logos. These labels are totally customizable.

Self-Adhesive Labels

Numeric Labels

Numeric Color-Coding is a method of filing where consecutively numbered folders are placed in the filing system in sequential order.

Straight Numeric systems are the most practical systems in larger file rooms – filed lowest to highest number. Typically, color coding illustrates all of the digits of the number. Policies, invoices, accounts and claims are examples of records referenced by number. Unlike alpha systems, there is no duplication. Each number is unique and file confidentiality is enhanced because access to a record is not possible without a cross reference (database).

Terminal Digit filing is a method of arranging folders so that all numbers with like ending digits are grouped together. Terminal digit does not change the number of the files – it is simply an organization technique that uses numbers to divide files into unique and easily located groups. This provides an orderly way to maintain files with random number assignment or skips in numbers.

Options for Numeric Color-Coding:

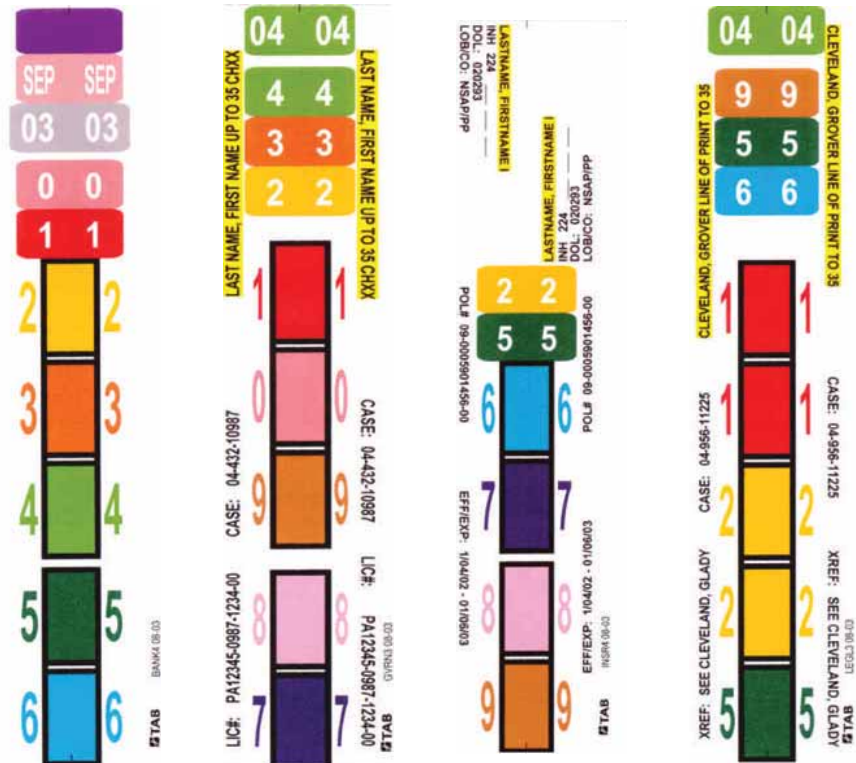

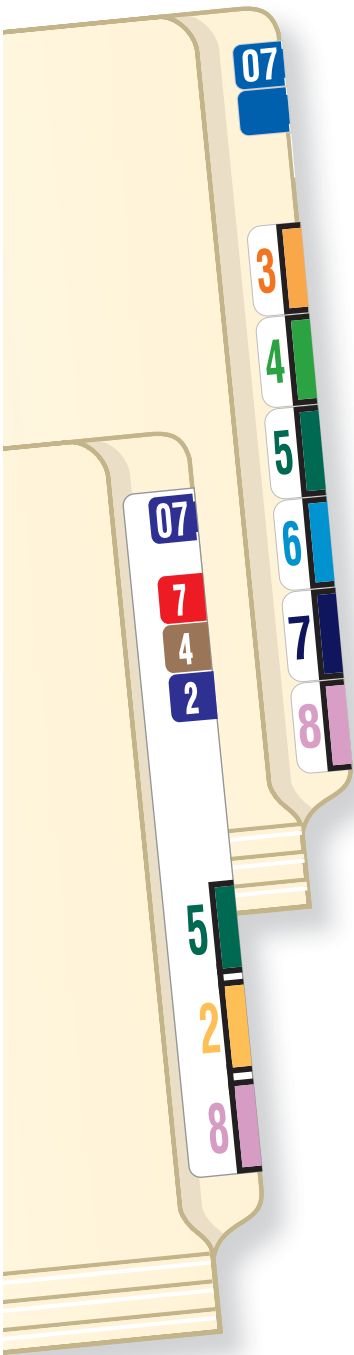

Hand Wrap Labels

Select and apply individual labels that are printed with inks and coated with adhesives that last a lifetime.

FilePak “Classic” Strip Labels are available for Straight Numeric systems only. They have the following options: standard format, tab colors and classification. No bar coding available.

FilePak “Full Feature” Strip Labels are available for Straight Numeric systems. However, these have unlimited color palette options, which allow matching to any competitor. Bar code, 3 of 9, with or without check digit.

CompuColor Strip Labels are data driven and have unlimited options, including any color palette, lines of cross-reference, highlighting, font options, even company logos. These labels are totally customizable.

Datafile Folders and Pockets uniquely fill the need of our Datafile customer. In 1994 Datafile Canada joined Tab in the US to form the preeminent filing systems company in North America, Australia and Europe. While usage is not as widespread in the US as in Canada, Datafile products continue to be in high demand from Tab.

The Folder of Choice is the most durable folder made – perfect for active filing systems where folders are frequently accessed, retrieved or transferred. Datafile gives you full-cut eternafilem re-inforced tabs. The tab is double thick for rigidity and coated with eternafilem for durability.
